Edited by Gideon B. Smith.

This Journal was established by the Am Silk Society for the purpose of diffusing tical information on the culture of silk in States. It has now been published one and may be considered a work of standar acter. The first year's publication, comp the first volume, contains a mass of valua formation, and it will be the object of the to make the second equal in all respects, superior, to the first. The important f now established beyond any question that th ple of the United States can make silk cl and better than any other nation upon earl has been proved by unimpeachable, testi that the entire cost of producing silk read market, does not exceed two dollars and tv five cents per pound, and its least value i dollars and fifty cents; also, that one ac ground planted in morus multicaulis, wi duce the first year the trees are planted, eight pounds of silk, leaving a clear profi producer of one hundred and eight dolla has also been proved that the children a males of any farmer's family can, wit greatest possible ease, produce from fifty hundred pounds of silk every year, witho cost whatever to the expenses of the farm the trees are planted; and therefore, that the amount of silk will be so much clear say from $225 to $450. With these facts we mit to an intelligent people whether it is great and an important object for them to
