PROSPECTUS OF THE

Journal of the American Silk Society And Rural Economist.

Edited by Gideon B. Smith.

This Journal was established by the American Silk Society for the purpose of diffusing practical information on the culture of silk in the States. It has now been published one year and may be considered a work of standard character. The first year's publication, comprising the first volume, contains a mass of valuable information, and it will be the object of the second to make the second equal in all respects, superior, to the first. The importance now established beyond any question that the people of the United States can make silk cloth and better than any other nation upon earth has been proved by unimpeachable testimony that the entire cost of producing silk ready for market, does not exceed two dollars and twenty five cents per pound, and its least value is one dollar and fifty cents; also, that one acre of ground planted in morus multicaulis, will produce the first year the trees are planted, eight pounds of silk, leaving a clear profit to the producer of one hundred and eight dollars. It has also been proved that the children and males of any farmer's family can, with the greatest possible ease, produce from fifty to one hundred pounds of silk every year, without cost whatever to the expenses of the farm, if the trees are planted; and therefore, that the amount of silk will be so much cleared up, say from $225 to $450. With these facts we submit to an intelligent people whether it is not a great and an important object for them to induce the culture of silk in every farmer's family in the Union. To enable all our farmers to make silk, the 'Journal of the American Silk Society' was established; it contains plain practical directions for cultivating the trees, feeding and rearing silk worms, reeling the silk, preparing it for market, &c. besides all other information that can be required to enable any person to enter upon the business, either on a large or small scale. Every friend of his country, into whose hands this paper may fall, will do a patriot and a philanthropist's work by inducing his friends and neighbors to enter their names upon the list of subscribers.

The Journal of the American Silk Society is published monthly, in pamphlet form; each number contains 32 octavo pages, printed on good type and handsome paper with a printed cover.

TERMS:

Two dollars a year, or six copies for one dollar, always to be paid before the work is sent. All subscriptions to begin with the first number of the year, and in no case will the work be sent to any subscriber longer than it has been paid for.

New subscribers, who take the first volume, will be charged only one dollar for the two years.
