

of thousands of log-cabin boys of the West—ye, whose hands of strength and hearts of fire have carried your country's dominion over a region more extended than the noblest empire of the Eastern World!

LOCO-FOCO DOCTRINES.

The reduction of wages is now openly advocated by the chieftains of the Loco-foco party in our own State as well as elsewhere. A few days since we saw it stated in a Hartford paper that the brother of the Loco candidate for Governor in Connecticut, who is himself a Loco, was preaching up at several of the manufactories in that State—that is to the agents of those establishments—that it was for their interest to join the Administration party in its policy and measures, because of their inevitable tendency to lower the price of labor and wages!

We learn now that a certain gentleman in the west end of our city is to be taken up as the Loco candidate for the Mayoralty of Portland, next month, who has within a few days, unqualifiedly stated that in his opinion the wages of mechanics and laborers are altogether too high, and ought to be reduced; and for his part he would not give such wages as are now paid any longer—or words to that effect!

Now this man is very honest, we dare say, in his doctrines, for he is reputedly a very honest man. But his doctrines, thus honestly entertained, are doctrines that would starve our population, and cast the children of the mechanic and laborer into the almshouse or upon the cold charity of an uncharitable and impoverished world. It is perfectly consistent for such a man to sustain Martin Van Buren's administration, and the Walkers, Buchanans, and Bentons, who belong to and uphold that administration, because every measure of it is now taken to bring about the very result which our citizen alluded to already is inculcating as desirable. But we ask the mechanic, the laborer—nay, every man who is willing to act up to the more noble and just maxim of live and let live—whether such doctrines are sufferable, and whether he will help either to keep men in office, or advocate the election of men to office, who entertain them, or any that bear a kindred character to them?—Pause and reflect.—Eastern Argus—Revived.

How can the loco-foco's pretend that the administration is not in favor of a standing army, when it maintains an army of 40,000 office-holders?—Con. Courant.

Ah, but that is not a standing army—'tis a running one.

PROSPECTUS

THE EXTRA P

The undersigned proposes Baltimore, the "Pilot Extra" form of double royal size, until 15th November, for sale in advance. This paper to the support of the election candidates for the Presidency, and this prospectus the expectation that efforts will give it an extended circulation of counteracting the influence of the Globe. The Post Office Department furnishes a corps of some fifty men, most of them active and organized for the distribution. This influence may be counteracted by active co-operation on the part of the Whig party. The Pilot is established under the auspices of the Whig members of the Legislature, and of the friends of General Cass in Congress, and the undersigned is pleased to hope that the Whig members of the United States will resolve to support the Post Office Department, and to have the poison of the Globe, the antidote shall be administered. All this will be heard by the people. It is our duty to speak, and if we can get a fair hearing, we have no apprehensions for the future. People will vindicate their rights, and hurl their oppressors from office.

Baltimore is a central point, and will be surrounded by active, ardent Whigs—old and young. The undersigned, through the aid of the Convention, in Maryland, will endeavor to complete an organization, and give to it the means of extended usefulness throughout the country. The undersigned has a prospectus, and the friends of the cause, especially the Young Men, will exert their influence in obtaining subscribers, to be forwarded at the day, through their friends, directly to him in Baltimore.

TERMS—One dollar, payable Current bank notes received.
