

The feeling in New-York City.—We yesterday received a letter from a friend in N. York, who writes: "The Locofocor here give it up. A friend of mine in the Custom House is already looking out for other business."

What an erroneous idea the Van Buren leaders had of the present popular movement, when they thought to arrest it by charges against Gen. Harrison! However worthy Gen. Harrison may be of popular confidence and affection, it is chiefly the sins of the rulers that have conjured up the storm which will shortly drive the rulers into retirement. If it had been possible to defend the Administration, this would have been the proper course for the partisans to pursue; but this could not be done without obliterating the history of the few past years. It was a miserable expedient to attempt by multiplying lies on Harrison to divert the public attention and the public indignation from the manifold sins of commission and omission and doctrine of those at the head of affairs.

Well, we have carried Maine, and now we go in for New Hampshire! Clear the way there, ye Locofocos of the Granite State!
