alter his elevation to that high office. is a bereavement peculiarly calculated to be regarded as a heavy affliction, and impress all minds with a sense of the uncertainty of human things, and of the dependence of Nations as well as of individuals, upon our Heavenly Parent.

I have thought, therefore, that I should be acting in conformity with the general expectation and feelings of the community in recommending as I now do, to the People of the United States, of every religious denomination, that, according to their several modes and forms of worship, they observe a day of Fasting and Prayer, by such religious services as may be suitable on the occasion; and I recommend Friday, the fourteenth day of May next, for that purpose; to the end that on that day, we may with one accord, join in humble and reverential approach to Him, in whose hands we are, invoking him to inspire us with a proper spirit and temper of heart and mind under these crowns of His providence, and still to bestow His gracious benedictions upon our Government and our country.

JOHN TYLER.

WASHINGTON, April 13, 1841.

Men take more pains for this world than Heaven would cost them; and when they have what they would aim at, don't live to enjoy it. The grave lies unseen between us and the object we reach after. When one lives to enjoy what he has in view, ten thousand are cut off in pursuit of it.

The world is so full of fools that he who would avoid seeing any must shut himself up, and break his looking-glass.

A hospitable man is never ashamed of his dinner when you come to dine with him.

A good wife exhibits her love for her husband by trying to promote his welfare, and by administering to his comfort.

We hear that our old friend, Gen. Foote, of Mississippi, is in town. General, if you again promise to give a poor negro five dollars for bringing us an impertinent message, don't run away, as you did before, without paying him.—Lou. Jour.

Gentlemen, who came on a boat which arrived here yesterday morning, inform us that when they passed North Bend, Gen. Harrison's house was on fire. The eastern wing was entirely consumed, and the fire was still raging. There was a strong hope, however, that the rest of the building would be saved. A large number of persons were laboring to extinguish the flames.

caught fire. They, consequently, are in a disposition to pay for the loss at least until after a thorough investigation should take place.

One of the most important questions which we believe to have taken place at the "Talk" was, that they had thought the Government had intended to buy the land from them, and drive them away. They wished to know the fact thereto; because they were not willing to make any sale or treaty until the price should be paid and distributed to the people of their nation. The Governor had no official information re the matter; but he was otherwise aware that Congress had made an appropriation to defray the expenses of holding a treaty, and it probably would not take place until the payment of the present annuity.

It was not the intention of the Government to use any coercive measures towards the Indians to treat with them amicably, and such measures as would lead to the benefit of both the whites and Indians. On this the latter assentingly replied.

In order to be in readiness for the procession of our late venerable Governor, we have issued our paper an hour earlier than usual, which we hope will be a sufficient apology for its meanness.

YOU must all recollect, that the certainty is to night—All the young gentlemen who have seen on the subject, are anxious to attend—we hope the young gentlemen will make a display of their gallantry on an occasion.

We are authorized to announce that CURREY, as a Candidate for Railroad Commissioner—Election in November
