

Can he not be removed in the nittee is the most important one in the se, and particularly so, at this crisis of foreign relations.

OUR LEGISLATURE.

We presume our Legislature adjourned Monday last, which was the day fixed for purpose. If not, they had better adjourn and go home. When continual disorder is the order of the day, when fights are being in the Representative Hall and around the capitol, when members go armed with bowie knives, pistols, and double barrel shot guns, when challenges are sent and duels ready to be fought, it is time. How will public opinion sanction these disgraceful outrages in our Halls of Legislation? Will they intend to write plainly, and are prepared to censure friends and foes, who have any objection with these violations of public morals and decorum. What our Legislature has done, we cannot, as at present adjourn, say. We think not much. The valour law has been repealed, but not satisfactorily so, unless we have been misinformed of the contents of the bill, which we have not seen. The gallon law has been modified in some particulars, but the particulars we have not yet been able to learn. We believe however, the license law has been restored. The fate of the Governor's bill is uncertain. A bill to create a Chancery Court for North Mississippi has been passed, and we are to have, hereafter, a Chancery Court at Holly Springs. What the Legislature may have done on the last day of its session, is to us a matter of some doubt and uncertainty. We know, that heretofore it has been customary for it to adjourn in something very à la mode.

The report with the accompanying documents, upon the Union Bank Bonds, necessarily from its length, excludes from this paper this week its usual variety. We are desirous, however, to lay every thing in regard to this important subject, which now exciting so much attention throughout the Union, before our readers at once, they might the better judge.

DIED—We have the melancholy duty of announcing the death of the Editor of this paper, just as the paper was going to press—he having in the kindest possible manner intended to die—his death or a more awful catastrophe, necessary to fill out this column. O Criekey!
"In the midst of Life, 'WE' are in Death!"
Dollar Democrat!

Alas! poor Howel! We love him more now that he is gone from us forever. His many virtues are lessened and his many virtues greatly increased in our remembrance.—
